Thanks for the game! Overall companion app is great, offering many ways to check statistics and weapons, as well as checking tasks for weapons and/or dog tags. I started playing battlefield 1 quite recently loved playing the game very much with my friends, we even did a platoon together, so when I saw there was a companion app I was intrigued by what it would offer. While he has his problems with the player I believe some fixes can be made. The longest time after receiving the program, I and a friend couldn't get the creator of the logo to properly save the logos we created, about three weeks after the app I discovered I was suddenly able to save the logo, but even after saving the logo it as if I hadn't made the logo at all on the screen after clicking on the icon to save the logo. I was primarily excited about using the use of app for this feature so my friends and I might have some cool emblems, but trying to do that only brought us frustration. Again, this program has a great interface and style. It feels innovative compared to other video game-related apps I see. But, it's an annoying buggy. The screen will freeze after I press the weapon and I can only press the bottom buttons on the screen. After repeating this multiple times, the application will crash. If I can no longer edit my dog tag as I want or that really bugs me since I rightly earned these updates to my badge. Another problem is that when I buy new weapons, or anything, the number for how many military bonds I don't have is if I don't go out of the program, kill it and then open it again. EA/DICE needs to fix this immediately as this app is very useful and has great potential. The idea for EA/DICE to add is the ability to open combat packages instead of just seeing notifications. Such an improvement would be surprising. Hallo mein freunden and all and EA-DICE, amazing frostbit engine that nourishes the best experience of our games! Anyway, I'm happy that you guys have been teaming things together as this app is really good! Of course, there may be some bad reviews on this app, but some updates for other champs can make the community a little better tool! Also, another thing is the recommended thing to say from a community guy like me... You have to add some background music from the games on the battlefield depending on which tab on, on this app. I understand that this app can be really useful (REALLY = in bold), but some music to keep people using it feel like the battlefield will never leave its side and so of course your side and my side as well (in a friendly way)! anyway great work on the games that you guys created and unite the community like we do together! Developer Website App Support Privacy Policy Hello. Right Now you can use Battlefield Tracker if you want to check your stats. Unfortunately, there is no news about the official Battlefield Companion. I bought a Bf v and it does not register as bought on BF companion or BF menu. It gets annoying as I bought the game and want to do things with my phone on it. We found that JavaScript is disabled in this browser.
